A Peek at our Week

8th February 2019

Our Learning This Week

It has been an extremely busy week, we have been finishing our learning: 'what makes me who I am?' This week we looked at the human body. We learnt about different organs and the jobs that they do. The children created their own version of 'head shoulders knees and toes' but using the organs. Ask your child to recite their version of the song. After looking at organs we moved on to learning about the skeleton. We looked at the bones and what their jobs were. The teachers even dressed up as skeletons, the children then identified all their bones.

We culminated this week with learning about our senses. The children got to explore their five different senses at five different stations. They then used their senses to describe items.

We have also celebrated Chinese New Year this week. We had a visit from Mrs Chen who shared lots of wonderful information about the New Year and the children all took part in Chinese New Year activities.

To add to our excitement of the week, we visited our new building. The children got to see their brand new classrooms and got to have a look around the whole school too. They shared their ideas about how they wanted their new classrooms to look. We hope they will be happy with what they see in two weeks time.

Literacy

It is the end of our 'traditional tale' topic in literacy. This week the children made turnip soup using the recipes they wrote last week - unfortunately the cooking process did not turn out great. When we are in the new building and have a kitchen facility we will be giving it another go. The children were all authors of their very own storybooks this week. They used their knowledge of traditional tales to create their very own.

Maths

In maths we have been solidifying our knowledge of finding the difference. Turning word questions into equations and using methods that we feel comfortable with to solve them.

Kitta Aleph Notices

Your child will have received 'alien words' in their bag to work on over the holidays to support them with their phonic screening check.

We have had a wonderful half term with lots of exciting things that have happened. We hope to continue to make lots of wonderful memories in our new school.

Have a wonderful and restful few weeks and we will see you in our new school.
